THIS CONCERT IN AID OF ST. PETER'S CHURCH, WATSON'S BAY.—The concert which took place yesterday evening, at the Bunting Club, was a most successful one. Watson's Bay was very well represented, both as regards music and the attendance. The hall was densely crowded by a fashionable audience, and the programme was well received. The singing was of a high order. On several occasions, met with a hearty reception, and her singing was loudly applauded. We shall notice the concert more fully in our next issue.

It was highly probable that the reason for that the unfortunate young man slipped into the deep water of the pond while endeavoring to reach fish raft, which was a few rods from the levee. The boat was overturned between the side of the waterhole and the raft. Jays replied: "I was died from suffocation by drowning, as we are not really sufficed that the occurrence was purely accidental."

CONVULSION'S INQUIRY.—The City Council held an inquiry into the case of a young girl, who was a native of a legitimate child which expired a few hours before. On the testimony of the mother, the dry nurse, and Dr. L-millon, the coroner held that "Daisy" again was weaned from convulsions brought on by latent diphtheria.

DEATH OF THE FIRST OF MIXED RACE OF EUROPEAN AND ABORIGINAL IN TASMANIA.—The following interesting narrative appears in the Hobart Town Advertiser of the 10th inst. The deceased was born on Kangaroo Island, and was the first of the mixed race to be christened in the colony. Her father, a Lieutenant's Land (now Tasmann), his mother being a native of the last-mentioned place. Her maiden name was HARRIS, and her Christian name was MARY.

One of the boys, Burdette, is the son of the deceased, and the other, the deceased's interesting appearance and beautiful eyes in the history of the island. There was a very large attendance both before and after the funeral, and the funeral with the 3rd congregation, with their relations and friends, was a remarkable feature on the occasion.

ELECTION FOR NORTHUMBERLAND

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

MR. A. A. TIGHE'S MEETING.

ON Monday evening, a large body of miners assembled at Mr. Cameron's large room, Borehole, to hear a lecture to be delivered by Mr. A. A. Tighe, the late representative for the county of Northumberland in Parliament for the county of Northumberland.

Mr. Yates, a miner, was voted to the chair.

THE CHAIRMAN had much pleasure in introducing Tighe to the meeting, and trusted that a patient audience would be accorded to him whilst he explained his political views.

MR. TIGHE commenced by observing that his life's abilities had been placed at the disposal of the electors of Northumberland for the past two years as their representative in Parliament, and he trusted that, whilst occupied that position, he had taken part in such legislation as conducive to the public welfare. He had the honour

Northumberland, very numerous, signed, and in compliance therewith he was present before them again as a candidate for their suffrages. He wished to dispel the minds of a few the erroneous impressions which were calculated to receive from reports that had industriously circulated against himself, and he regretted when referring to these subjects, to state that he made during his career as a public man some enemies

[illegible]

Mr. Tigue's advertisement was not without effect. The coal companies were concerned, Mr. Tigue stated, and he had been the means of forwarding their interests. In some extent whilst occupying a seat in Parliament, in the course of duty he had persevered and been successful in procuring concessions resulting in the benefit of the miners. With regard to the late Ministerial defeat, he looked upon it as a defeat for the coal companies, and not for the miners. Indignantly he declared, however, that the Government had been defeated, and he therefore, received the disapprobation of the colored community, which had been testified by the several constitutional conventions to which they had been summoned. The Premier had also been unsuccessful in two places, and his associates had also been defeated by the liberal candidates. Another mistake which would draw attention to, that which some had expressed disapprobation with the miner he had dealt with, and he was not at all surprised that the Government were suffering expiation for several errors and tokens of approval given to the miners. Mr. Tigue adverted to certain amendments which he thought desirable in the Municipal Act, and

He characterised as a most useful statute, still capable of improvement in its provisions. He agreed with the principle of payment of members, would not support any such measure as would properly pay those who voted for it—he would only support such measure after the public had signified their approval of payment of members, and that could only be done general election. It would be a successful measure.

ment to vote themselves salaries without the expression of the country. In reference to State religion, he considered that it would be undesirable to open such a measure. It had been abolished by a majority in Parliament, and the vote of the House should be accepted as final and conclusive on the subject. The speaker dwelt at considerable length on this question, complaining of the interference of the clergy in elections as he did not consider they gave up their legitimate rights.

had taste, be admitted, for them to act and take part in elections—but he had no right personally to complain on this account. He was sorry to find that his cause was feared that they too often supported a candidate for sectarian reasons; and he referred to several instances where this had been the case—amongst others, to the case of Mr. Alexander, who himself avowed on the hustings that the clergyman had written to him, stating such to be the case. The question of State-aid had been settled, and he trusted that the Government would not be so foolish as to attempt to do anything to disturb it.

port to the country to re-open it, he would send his own men to the country to open it. He discussed the subject of the petition, for which £30,000 a year had been voted, upon the motion of Mr. Botton; and then proceeded to speak upon a subject of interest to the miners, and in which there were all more or less personally concerned, viz. the track system and Tommy shops, and the exorbitant prices that are sometimes extorted from labourers by these nefarious agencies. On the subject of duration of parliaments, the speaker stated that he had written a pamphlet on the subject.

period than three years. The speaker then reviewed the work of the Land Act, and spoke on the very important question of the water rights for many agricultural states interested in his legislation, and the work upon taxation, and water rights. He then spoke on the work of the act to amend the law, he was of opinion that the work of the act should be continued, and this he had mentioned in his place in the House. He had also voted for the new act for the water rights, and thought it a very fine and just change for the water rights.

The speech occupied about two hours, and was attentively listened to throughout, and at the conclusion the compliments were passed to the chairman, the Press, heartily cheering for Mr. Tigue, not, however, before he had been unanimously acknowledged a fit and proper person to represent Northumberland by all present.

NARELLAN ELECTORATE.

[FROM A CORRESPONDENT.]

A VERY influential and, for so sparsely populated a locality, a numerous assembly of the electors of Green Dale met at the residence of Mr. Simpson to hear the statements and political views of Mr. Leary, one of the candidates for the suffrage of the electors of Naresian.

The chair was occupied by Mr. M'INTOSH, who after introducing Mr. Leary to the meeting, that he felt

Mr. LEAHY then came forward and spoke at considerable length. He commenced by stating in clear and forceful terms the course he took from the commencement of his parliamentary career, and succeeded in producing a vivid impression on the minds of his hearers. He then and groundless was the nature of the charges that brought against him by his unscrupulous detractors. Informed that he had commenced his political life strong predilections in favour of Mr. Cowper's Government and energetically supported—never being absent from post—every measure that he conceived would be of benefit to the country. He voted for every clause in the Bill of Mr. Robertson. He held by and supported them against adverse interests, helped to carry that important measure triumphantly.

through to its completion. He was gratified to say that bill has already proved of great advantage to the country. There are now ten thousand families located on five selectors on the waste lands of the Crown in localities favourable circumstances, and with encouraging prospects for the future. Bishop Barker in his tour through the various districts of the Interior, has borne high testimony to the benign influence of that popular measure, and favourably contrasted the present state of those localities he revisited with their former condition when he visited them.

him at an earlier period. But when Mr. Cowper disclosed his Police Bill he felt bound as an honest and patriotic member--convinced as he was that a social-moral system as that evidently is, would prove a curse to the country, ruinously expensive, and fall as it had done in England for the prevention of crime and the suppression of bootlegging--to warn the House of the perniciolous tendency of that system, and he prophesied its utter failure, and he unfortunately proved but too true. Mr. Smart has introduced a tariff of a most objectionable nature.

which he, as one thoroughly convinced of the ruinous to be apprehended from protective duties, the exclusive nature of the advantages expected to accrue the revenue, offered his decided opposition to all its stages. However, this tariff was not entertained the House, when Mr. Martin (then in opposition) bro-forward a motion of want of confidence to the then Administration upon the disturbed state of the country, and expression to these memorable words, "That any Minister increasing expenditure for their semi-military system, which cost the country £300,000 a-year, likelihood of Mr. McLeis demanding another preliminary sum of £50,000, with other perpetrate additions to the expense without any benefit being effected in the state of the country, and knowing that the war was triumphant in the face of this sensible opposition, we are not surprised that the was charged with the responsibility of constructing Ministry. As the tariff of Mr. Bagar was a copy, or no, of that of Mr. Smart, he felt conscientiously to offer that measure a similar opposition; it proved responsible that it was withdrawn, and one substitute

Before he was a discarded with there had been applied to by the City to answer certain questions on the subject. He did not want State aid a settled question; they were more interested in the country; theology from outside difficult it was to obtain voluntary contributions. The amount to be collected in each constituency was prepared. To show that he entertained no ill will toward the State-aid he had always done, he said as published in the National Mercury, in 1890, "I have been too busy legislating. No one would for a moment deny the necessity of an elective Upper House to sweep away the present system of nomination on an elective system. He thought that the late Ministry were in a measure. If he was returned, he would not have tied to the cost-fall of any Ministry vote for measures, and not man; he would not have been the Ministry's against the Ministry, but did not approve of the conduct. He had no favour to ask of or from the Government. He did not want any office; he had no master for the last twenty-five years, so as well as far as his conduct in the House was concerned. He was willing to become their servant as far as the House was concerned, but not as far as the Privy Council was concerned. He was the Privy Counsellor during Mr. Peel's Administration.

He had always done to promote the interest of the steam company, time to time sent up the steamer to Maila, but it was not possible to have direct communication with Hydabund, so he had depended on the river would effect this, and a means of letting off some of the food water and the interest that he had always taken in the river, and he mentioned the active part he had taken in the river, and that he had learned how he had fought hard for its construction and Mr. Lipacomb. great that the Drainage Bill had always been a measure, they could not expect to get a perfect one at first, but it was most desirable that it should be passed as soon as possible. In conclusion, he begged the electors to strengthen the hands of their worthy representatives, and to support the Government. He would ask the electors if they would meet him often, and tell him of their views, and pledge himself to give his undivided attention to them, especially when the Estimates were being made. He would then turn to the subject of the Drainage Bill, and would read a letter which he had just received from a gentleman who had been cast against him, and who said that he could not strengthen his cause, and that he was in triumph to the head of the Government. He would then read a letter which he had just received from a gentleman who had been cast against him, and who said that he could not strengthen his cause, and that he was in triumph to the head of the Government.

Dr. LINCOLN, next addressed the electors, at the moment of deepest interest had arrived, when he was required to exercise the proudest and the most privileged of the citizen, namely, to elect or not, in the ordinary language of election, to elect or to reject the candidates who were to represent their interests in the forthcoming Parliament, because by it the humblest elector was placed on a level with the highest; important, because the views of generations yet unborn might depend upon the choice of a few individuals which had forced upon them had arisen not only from the fact that the denials of this or that particular Ministerialist had denoted expiation of a young and vigorous nation.

He advocated the high salaries of some of the principal officers. Care should be taken to the squatters, but at the same time, that they should pay a fair land they occupy. With regard to State-aided education, he said that education was the only thing in the world that was not false; he (Dr. Liddell) would name Mr. Chapman. The last speaker was not a flood-gate; a few years ago he carried out against them. He was strongly opposed to that question he would stand or fall. He said that if the State-aid question was revived it would mean a serious disturbance in the colony, and disturb the peace and good fellowship that had hitherto reigned. He said that giving the proceeds of the Church and the school to the benefit of the clergy and education in the colony would not go. He had always been in favor of the church, though on a much larger scale than now proposed. With regard to the Uganda question he said it should be elective, and

Mr. ARNOLD (who was present) had great pleasure in commenting on this occasion to meet a good opportunity. He had a larger acquaintance with the subject, and considering a seat in the Assembly its acquisition might be a pecuniary advantage—even although it was for one of the "prizes." CITY OF HOBART, and SOUTHERN CROSS

To Steamship Companies, Shipowners, Merchants, and others.

JAN. 'ES LAWRENCE has been honoured with instructions from the Directors of the "New Navigation Company" to sell by public auction, at the "City" Rooms, Colinton Street, West, Edinburgh, at 11 A.M., January 6th, at 12 o'clock, about two newly allied Steamships City of Hobart, and Southern Cross, and will favourably know in these colonies, as a link at present in splendid working order.

The auctioneer, in calling public attention to the sale of these splendid steamships, does it quite unnecessary to make any comments as they are "the City of Hobart" and "Southern Cross" which have been very extensively overhauled, both as to hull and machinery, and may be fairly looked upon as a new ship in all respects.

 The Southern Cross is quite new, and lately arrived in the colonies, and without exception, the most perfect piece of steamship architecture which, up to this date, has appeared in these waters. This really fine vessel was built by the order of the company, under the supervision of a gentleman of great colonial experience, and possessing all the improvements and requirements to render her suitable for any of the intercolonial trade. Her saloon has all the modern conveniences or regards ventilation and comfort, and is not surpassed by any steamer in the southern hemisphere. The consumption of fuel is either of the most comparatively small for the speed attained.

It is in the immediate neighbourhood (about 100 yards) of the

BRIDGE,

And also of the

It is without doubt the most valuable spot, for its site, in the colony.

Important Sale of one of the most valuable SQUATTING PROPERTIES in Queensland.

To be Sold without Reserve on TUESDAY, 31st January, 1886, at 3 p.m.

To close a Partnership.

CUNNINGHAM and MACREDIE have received positive instructions from the proprietors, Messrs. J. De Little and A. Douglas, to submit to the public the sale of the above property on TUESDAY, January 31, 1886, at 3 p.m., at their Wool Mart, Collins-street West, Melbourne.

The following valuable runs, all adjoining each other, and lying on the banks of the River:

Saint Ann's.....	50 square miles
Scoutwater.....	39 ditto
Stroudwater.....	64 ditto
McLean's Swamp.....	15 ditto
Ditto Back Block.....	26 ditto
Carphallby.....	30 ditto
Linnarth.....	30 ditto

Total..... 501 square miles.
Adapted for either sheep or cattle.
These stations have all been surveyed by a licensed Government surveyor at a cost of £750, and the boundaries are therefore indisputable.
The leases for nineteen years were now in course of issue, and the annual rent will not exceed £300 per annum for the lease, and no more than £100 for the improvements.
One great attractive squanting porperty posesses in Northern Queensland is, that the lease is a compact entered into by the Crown and the tenant under an Act of the Colonial Government, and the lease is not subject to be altered by new land bills, as in this colony and in New South Wales.
Three stations form one of the most attractive and compact squanting porperty in the Australian colonies, and at present have depaerting on them
3000 HEAD WELL-BRED MIXED CATTLE
purchased from one of the most celebrated breeders on the Banks of the Darling River, and consisting of 1000 pure bred cattle, and a lot of 600 cows bred down late year gave in an average 255 lbs. of tallow per head.
The breed of the cattle has been kept up by a constant change of blood, and the result is a well-bred

Two swarms of working bullocks and about thirty stock horses will be given in with the stations, together with traps, cooking utensils, tools, &c., &c.

A pastoral station this cannot be surmised in any of the colonies, and its carrying capabilities may be estimated at 3000 head of cattle, but, before the sheep are introduced, the country is too hilly, the soil being black and red loam, covered with grasses of the finest and most nutritious description, the blue and kangaroo grasses prevailing, and there are there quite a number of small rivers, the elevation from 300 to 800 feet, thinly timbered with bloodwood and ironbark, and available to their summit for grazing purposes.

The principal of this district is said to be 1500 feet above the sea level, and it is distant 120 miles in a south-west direction from the beautiful harbour of Port Denison, so that it is not distant period to be the future capital of Northern Queensland.

These runs are abundantly watered by the river Goulter and other streams, with sub-branches and swamps, giving a most liberal supply of water at all seasons.

The institutions of the colony are as follows:

hula, stone, and yards, conveniently divided, capable of holding 3000 head of cattle. There are also a well-fenced paddock and a paddock of 200 acres, and a paddock of about 50 acres, together with out-station, huts, &c.

"I am taking an extract from a report made by Mr. F. J. Byrne, a gentleman well known in this colony as an experienced squatter, and now holding a leading position under the Government of Queensland:—

"I am a stationer of Scotch descent as the finest property in the Kennedy District which I have yet seen or heard of, not excepting the famous Valley of Lagoona."

"The stationer is an extract from Messrs. Williams, Overbush, & Co. of Sydney, who are the owners of the property."

"The Importations from Queensland maintain their record, and command accordingly extensive prices, and are sold at a very high price."

"These stations will be sold to one lot only, and may be made in parcels, and the terms will be one-third cash, the balance by bills at one, two, and three years, secured on the property, with interest at eight per cent, and no commission added."

Further particulars, with letters to inspect, may be obtained from Mr. J. B. McEwen, of Sydney, or from Mr. De Little, 75, William-street; or from Mr. Poughan, Geelong.
